

Michigan Adoption Resource Guide

Dear Friend:

Greetings! Thank you for your interest in adoption. Michigan Family Forum is pleased to provide you with this Michigan Adoption Resource Guide.

Promoting adoption is one important way to ensure that more children get what every child needs - the love and support of a mom and a dad. In fact, studies regularly show that children in adoptive homes do better in every measurement of well-being when compared to those raised in unmarried or foster home environments.

Currently, Michigan has over 18,500 children in our foster care system. Many of these children are eligible for adoption including over 6,000 children who have no legal parent and are simply waiting for an adoptive family. Furthermore, less than two percent of all children born to unwed mothers in Michigan are released into an adoptive home. Research has also revealed that young women and adoptive couples are often misinformed about the adoption process.

Clearly, we can do a much better job of encouraging adoption in Michigan. This resource guide is intended to help you be part of the solution. Whether you are a student, teacher, counselor, birth-parent or one considering adoption, we hope this guide will be helpful.

We can all play a role in helping Michigan become a national leader in the promotion of adoption. Thank you for doing your part to be an advocate for Michigan's children.

Please feel free to contact us if you have any questions or would like to order additional copies of this guide. We look forward to working with you in the months ahead!

Sincerely,

Brad Snavelly
Executive Director

The principal research on this project was conducted by Stephanie Hoff, a second year law student at Capital University and a Blackstone Fellow with the Alliance Defense Fund.

Adoption: One Story Among Millions

“NIKKI”

Nikki is a beautiful, twenty-seven-year-old woman. She was exposed to classical music by her loving parents as she was growing up. Today she has a Master’s Degree in Music and sings in an opera. Nikki was adopted. Four years ago, Nikki hired a private investigator to find her birthmother. Although she loved her parents, she was curious about the woman who brought her into this world.

Lori became pregnant at the age of 16. As a result of feeling scared and alone, Lori kept her pregnancy a secret for seven months. Lori was not provided with much information, but she knew of the different options she had. Lori made the decision of adoption for her baby before telling anyone of her pregnancy. She chose adoption for several reasons. Since she and her boyfriend were so young, she knew that they were not able to provide for a child emotionally or financially. She felt it was unfair for her parents to have to provide for them, and his parents were unable to do so. At no time were any of these decisions easy for Lori. She would describe them as heart wrenching. However, she knew then, and still believes now, that it was the best decision that she could have made.

Lori went to her mother with her decision. Her mother was crushed, but very supportive and helpful. They went to a fertility doctor who knew of a couple having difficulty getting pregnant. While Lori knew that she was making the best decision for both herself and her child, she also knew interaction with the couple or the baby would be emotionally difficult to the point that she might change her mind. Lori was alert for most of the birthing process, but asked to not be awake for the birth. She didn’t know that she had a girl. Lori and her boyfriend both signed the papers to confirm the adoption.

As a result of Lori’s decision, her medical expenses were paid for by the adoptive parents. Lori did not miss any high school and still graduated on time. Lori is now married, has earned an Associate Degree and is working toward her Bachelor Degree. She has since met the girl that she gave birth to so many years ago.

Nikki always knew that she was adopted and always embraced her adoption knowing that she was wanted by her adoptive parents. She also got to be a big sister to another adopted daughter. Lori gave the adoptive parents the gift of a child that they were not able to have on their own.

Adoption Facts

The concept of adoption was not legally recognized in the United States until the 1850's, with the inception of the first adoption laws. While transfers of children to substitute parents had occurred informally since American colonial times, adoption statutes legitimized the informal adoptive arrangements which previously existed.

In 1851, Massachusetts became the first state to pass a law regulating the adoption of children. Institutions for parentless children were organized by religious and other charitable groups.

Approximately 140,000 children are adopted by American families each year. Approximately 7 million Americans are adopted persons.
www.adoptionfacts.org

As many as 100 million Americans have adoption in their immediate family. Someone in the family was adopted, has adopted or has chosen to place her child for adoption.
www.adoptionfacts.org

1.7 million households contain adopted children. These households comprise 4 percent of all households in which children reside.
US Census Bureau

Each year, November is designated National Adoption Month by the President of the United States. This was first declared in 1990.
US Census Bureau

78 percent of Americans think the country should be doing more to encourage adoption.
National Adoption Attitudes Survey, June 2002

A lower percentage of adopted children (12%) than biological children (18%) live below the poverty level nationwide.
US Census Bureau

There were 1,525,345 births to unmarried woman in 2005.
Births: Final Data for 2005; National Vital Statistics Report

From 1989 to 1995, less than 1% of unwed mothers chose adoption for their infants. The choice for adoption is decreasing so much that it is difficult to obtain more recent statistics.

Information for Adoptive Parents

DOMESTIC INFANT ADOPTION

In choosing adoption, prospective adoptive parents will generally begin by choosing an agency or an attorney (utilized in private adoption). Factors to consider in choosing an agency are:

- Mission statement/belief system
- Counseling provided
- Approximate time that parents wait at the agency for placement
(Note: Birthmothers choose adoptive parents based on their profile. They are not chosen according to time on a “wait list”.)
- Personal recommendations of others that have used the agency
- History of the agency

HOME STUDY

Prior to adopting a child, prospective parents must participate in a pre-placement assessment. This assessment involves interviews as well as a home visit. Information gathered during the assessment contributes to the family profile that birthmothers receive in order to choose adoptive parents. The profile of the family includes names, religion and other important information. There is a fee for the home study that varies with agency.

ADOPTION PLANS

Once a birthmother chooses a set of adoptive parents, the agency will recommend making an adoption plan. This plan determines the desired openness of the adoption. If the birthmother would like an open adoption, the chosen parents are included in the discussion about the plan which includes frequency of visits, letters and/or phone calls. An entirely confidential adoption is where there is no exchange of information. The adoption plan can fall anywhere between completely open and confidential. While the adoption is legally binding, the terms discussed concerning the openness of the adoption are not. The sincerity of the adoptive parents may influence the choice of the birthmother.

COUNSELING

Building a family through adoption involves unique challenges. Those touched by adoption experience issues and concerns which can be addressed through education, support, and problem solving. It is important to support adoptive families with ongoing services after the adoption is finalized to ensure not only a healthy beginning but also lifelong family wellness. In an effort to support families throughout the adoption experience, some services that may be offered include:

- Short-term counseling for the families, crisis response and a referral source for follow-up.
- Services offered to adopted persons and birthparents who need contact with each other.
- Workshops and seminars which address issues and concerns related to adoption and provide education and resources for families.
- Support groups of various kinds

FINANCING AND COST

The cost of adoption varies with fees for processing the paperwork and for the home assessments. Parents that are chosen may be responsible financially for their birthmother’s counseling, living expenses and legal fees unless the birthmother waives these services. Parents may be required to pay for the medical expenses of the pregnancy and birth as well. There are loan programs to assist with adoptions as well as significant tax credits given by both state and federal governments (<http://www.irs.gov/taxtopics/tc607.html>). Qualifying expenses include reasonable and necessary adoption fees, court costs, attorney fees, traveling expenses (including meals and lodging while away from home), and other expenses directly related to and for which the principal purpose is the legal adoption of a child.

COMPLETING THE ADOPTION AND POST-PLACEMENT VISITS

After the baby is born, the birthmother will then be able to sign the release papers, which finalizes the birthmother's role in the adoption. After signing the release, the birthparent(s) has 21 days to petition the court for a rehearing in the case of fraud or duress, but not a change of mind. The baby will often be able to go directly home with the adopting family. The agency will then conduct a series of visits at the home of the adopting family to monitor the family and the care of the child. The number of visits may vary, but they usually last from six months to a year. The purpose is to provide not only support for the adopting parents as they adjust, but also to gather information so that the caseworker can make a recommendation to the court for the best interest of the child. At this time, the court will finalize the adoption.

INDEPENDENT ADOPTION

Independent adoptions by an attorney have a similar process to that of an agency. An adopting family must still have an agency do a pre-placement assessment. Independent adoptions are generally done through a private practice attorney because the adopting parents are either relatives or someone that the birthmother already knows. Instead of the baby being released into the custody of a private agency, the baby goes directly home with the family.

INTERNATIONAL ADOPTION

Adopting children internationally will differ in the openness aspect and is more costly. However, federal and state tax credits and loans still apply. There are also organizations that promote international adoption by offering grants and other financial support. International adoptions may involve traveling and can take several weeks to a year or more.

SPECIAL NEEDS AND FOSTER CARE ADOPTIONS

There are more than 100,000 children around the country waiting to be adopted. Although there is an abundance of families that seek infants, there are many children that are waiting and need families because they fit into one of the following categories:

- Children who have been neglected or abused
- Children who are older (especially ages 10 - 16)
- Children of racial minorities
- Siblings who must be placed together
- Children who have physical, emotional, behavioral, or mental challenges

Special needs adoptions are usually state-funded, and the adoptive parents pay no agency fee. Medical subsidies and financial assistance are often available until the child reaches 18 years of age, regardless of the adoptive family's income. Families are prepared for these adoptions by being provided:

- Full disclosure of information about the child(ren)
- Information about neglect, abuse, and the child welfare system
- Education about the child's needs and the special parenting skills required
- Visits which allow the family to adjust to its new family member(s)

See www.mare.org for a list of Michigan children waiting for an adoptive family.

Adoption Information for Birthparents

Going through an unexpected pregnancy can be one of the hardest times in a birthparent's life. Deciding to place the baby for adoption is not an easy choice; however, it is often a wise and loving option. Through adoption, birthparents are choosing to transfer their parental rights to two parents who are able to provide financially and emotionally for the child. This is not abandoning the baby; the birthparents have made an important decision to put their child's welfare first. Below are some of the common questions birthparents have about adoption.

COUNSELING

Adoption is an extraordinary choice that offers a child a great future, though it is not an easy process. The birthparent has faced many obstacles along this path to adoption, and perhaps the most difficult time may be yet to come — the separation from their child and the grieving process that follows. Counseling services are available to help birthparents work through this time and help them understand how both they and their baby can benefit from this decision. Adoption agencies will offer this counseling, though parents are not required to accept it.

FINANCIAL HELP

The birthmother is allowed to have the expenses of her pregnancy paid for by the adoptive family. These expenses might include medical, hospital, nursing and medication expenses. She may also have her living expenses paid for during the pregnancy and up to six weeks after the pregnancy. While there are many expenses that may be covered, the adoptive parents cannot pay the birthmother for her child.

CHOOSING ADOPTIVE PARENTS

Birthparents can choose the adoptive parents based on information an agency has been given from the adoptive parents themselves. Information that is provided includes first names, religion and other important information. Adoptive parents go through a careful screening and receive special training to parent adopted children. A social worker visits their home several times. In order to be licensed for adopting, the social worker and the agency must be confident that they would be good parents.

PARENTAL RIGHTS

After the baby is born, the birthmother will sign release forms to terminate all parental rights of the child. Legally, she is no longer responsible in any way for the child. If the birthmother is a minor, she must have the consent of her parent/guardian in order to choose adoption. If the birthfather is not part of the process, the birthmother is required to give the judge as much information as possible about how to contact him. The court will notify him of the hearing in which he may attempt to attain rights to the child. After signing the release, the baby's parents have 21 days to petition the court for a rehearing in the case of fraud or duress, but not a change of mind.

AFTER THE ADOPTION

Birthmothers are encouraged to make adoption plans. This plan will determine what the adoption will look like, including how often the mother will interact with the adoptive parents and her child. The birthmother can choose an open adoption, where she might have contact with the adoptive parents, a confidential adoption, where they never meet, or anywhere between. While the adoption is legally binding, the adoption plan is not, so it is important to choose sincere adoptive parents.

10 COMMON ADOPTION QUESTIONS

- Is counseling available during and after this process? Do I have to participate?
- Can my baby's father be involved in the adoption process? Does he have to be?
- Can my parents be involved in the process? Do they have to?
- Is there any financial help available for me? What about help with medical bills?
- How much will I know about the adoptive parents? Is it possible to meet them or know information about them? What if I don't want to know?
- How do you screen adoptive parents to make sure they are good people?
- What information do you provide the adoptive family about me?
- In the future, will I be able to have contact with my child if I want to?
- Will my child be able to contact me when he/she is older?
- What if I change my mind about adoption?

A Department of Human Services Specialist will answer questions like these:

- She says I'm not the father, but what if I am?
- Can I visit my baby?
- How is paternity established if we're not married?
- Can I get tested to make sure I'm the father?
- Where can I be tested?
- Who pays for the test?
- Will I have to pay for this child if it turns out I am the father?
- What if I don't want to establish that I'm the father? Do I have to?

Establishing paternity provides the child with a legal father. Both fathers and mothers have a right to know about their child and they have a responsibility to care for their child even if they are not married to each other. Children who have a dad in their life have fewer behavioral problems, do better in school, and have higher self-esteem than those without fathers in their lives.

Safe Delivery Program

---

Michigan law gives a woman in a crisis pregnancy the right to give her newborn baby (not more than 72 hours old) to a uniformed or identified emergency service provider on duty at a hospital, fire station or police station. This law allows a woman to do so without it being considered neglect or abandonment. The best place for the delivery of a child is in a hospital or hospital-based birthing center. The birthparent has a right to provide as much or as little information as she would like to the service provider, and all information given will remain confidential.

Safe Delivery Program Procedures:

- The emergency service provider (ESP) will accept the newborn and transfer the newborn to a hospital if the provider is not a hospital.
- The ESP will make a reasonable attempt to provide the parent with pertinent information.
- The ESP will give the birthparent the following information:
  - *By surrendering the newborn, the parent is releasing the newborn to a child placing agency for adoption
  - *The parent has 28 days to petition the court to regain custody
  - *After 28 days, there will be a hearing to terminate parental rights
  - *There will be a public notice of the hearing, which will not contain names
  - *The parent can receive confidential counseling or medical attention
  - *The state is required to reasonably attempt to identify both parents
  - *The parent may sign a release for the newborn which will be used at the parental rights termination hearing
- The ESP will ask for relevant family and medical information
- At the hospital, the newborn will be examined by a physician.
- If the physician comes to a reasonable belief that the newborn was abused or neglected or is not a newborn, the physician is required to report it to the proper authorities.
- Otherwise, the hospital will notify a child placing agency that the hospital has a newborn in temporary protective custody.

Raising Adoption Awareness

INFANT ADOPTION AWARENESS TRAINING PROGRAMS (IAATP)

In “Adoption Awareness” legislation passed in 2000, the United States Congress encouraged the consideration of infant adoption as a positive option for women and teens facing unplanned pregnancies. The act promotes counselors in health clinics and other settings to be trained in providing women with complete and accurate information on adoption.

“All women facing unintended pregnancies should have complete and accurate information on infant adoption along with information on resources available to them and their unborn children.”

-U.S. Representative Jim DeMint
Co-Sponsor, Adoption Awareness Act

The U.S. Congress and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services enacted the Adoption Awareness Act based on findings reported in “The Orientations of Pregnancy Counselors Toward Adoption” by Professor Edmund Mech, which found that:

40% of “pregnancy counselors” did not even raise the issue of adoption with pregnant clients. And of the 60% who did raise the issue, 40% of those counselors provided inaccurate or incomplete information.

Recipients of these federal grants have one-, two-, or three-day training sessions which address:

- Adoption as a time-honored and necessary social institution that protects children
- The effects of adoption on women and their children
- Understanding the needs and rights of people directly involved with the pregnant woman
- Correcting misconceptions about adoption
- Other issues in the client’s life
- Current state and federal laws related to adoption, placement decisions and procedures
- Current practices and policies in adoption, by agencies and attorneys
- Understanding and assessing the client’s interest in adoption
- Ways to provide information and support that enable the woman to make a fully-informed decision about her future and the future of the child
- Special issues in counseling teens
- The language of adoption and conventional communication styles
- How miscommunication and misunderstanding have unintended negative results
- Networking and collaboration with professionals

Recommended participants to be trained include:

- Health clinic workers in federally funded centers and community health centers
- Public and private pregnancy and options counselors
- Nursing staff
- Educators
- Members of helping professions who come into contact with pregnant clients and patients

A pregnancy counselor who is trained and certified through one of these programs has the ability to train other counselors within the clinic. A counselor will be equipped to share the materials from the training thereby increasing the overall awareness of infant adoption among staff and clients.

ORGANIZATIONS WITH INFANT ADOPTION AWARENESS TRAINING PROGRAMS

Together, the National Council for Adoption and Spaulding for Children have trained over 80,000 professionals, parents and policy makers in the best practices in adoption and adoption services. The groups develop training curricula, publications and videos to improve adoption methods and practices in order to ensure that adoption remains a viable option for pregnant women and their babies.

RESOLUTIONS

Each year, the Governor of Michigan declares November as Adoption Month in Michigan, coinciding with National Adoption Month.

Michigan also celebrates “Michigan Adoption Day.” Each November, the Michigan Supreme Court declares a Saturday in which they take the entire day to finalize adoptions. In so doing, they draw attention to the need for permanent homes for thousands of foster children.

SUGGESTIONS FOR AGENCIES AND SCHOOLS

- Provide training for pregnancy counselors to be educated on adoption
- Create an agency brochure to be distributed, especially during November (Adoption Month)
- Obtain Adoption Awareness Kits that are available from various organizations
- Contact media outlets to run Public Service Announcements that are available
- Provide accurate adoption information in sex education classes (A State of Michigan requirement for schools)

Mass media campaigns encourage adoption of children in need of homes and promote adoption as a healthy option for pregnant women and their babies.

Public Service Announcements for radio and television as well as for magazines and newspapers are available. National Council for Adoption announcements simply say:

“To all those who gave birth to, homes to, or just give thought to people adopted as infants, thanks for considering adoption.”

ABOUT MICHIGAN FAMILY FORUM

OUR CORE VALUES

- The family is the fundamental institution in a civil society.
- Healthy, lifelong marriages are beneficial to adults and offer the best environment in which to raise children and care for elders.
- The involvement of responsible fathers is essential to the economic, emotional, and social health of children.
- Children need the protection of stable families and a healthy understanding of human sexuality.
- Elders deserve to have security and care provided by loving family members in a comfortable home environment.
